In the summer-time, Willie took it with him to the country, where he had many good times with his kite. This story may be told when the children have paper-folding and make the kite. The square of paper lies cornerways before the child, after the diagonal fold has been made for a guide. Now the right and left edges are folded to meet at this central fold; a piece of worsted is sewed through the sharp angle, and the kite is completed. Older children call this a trapezium. SRINGTIME. When gentle Spring comes smiling, Old winter flies away; His snowy-cloak he wraps in haste, He dares no longer stay; Then all the seeds that are buried deep In their dark and chilly beds Wake up, wake up, from their winter s sleep, And lift their tiny heads. Come up to the warm, bright sunshine, Come...
