He too can maintain fair play, infuse a spirit of truth and honour into their games of exercise or skill, and hold an unseen helm by which to influence character. Thus he stoops to conquer; he loves his children, and at suitable times and opportunities enters into their feelings, tastes, and pursuits; and his children love him, and at suitable times and opportunities he endeavours to kindle theninterest in his higher and more enduring pleasures, intellectual and spiritual. Christian parents, be not moved by the unhallowed wit of writers and talkers, who select the worst features of mismanaging professors of evangelical religion, and unite them into a portrait at which the world may laugh, and the whole family of God be held up to ridicule....
