In the summer-time, Willie took it with him to the country, where he had many good times with his kite. This story may be told when the children have paper-folding and make the kite. The square of paper lies cornerways before the child, after the diagonal fold has been made for a guide. Now the right and left edges are folded to meet at this central fold; a piece of worsted is sewed through the sharp angle, and the kite is completed. Older children call this a trapezium. SRINGTIME. When gentle Spring comes smiling, Old winter flies away; His snowy-cloak he wraps in haste, He dares no longer stay; Then all the seeds that are buried deep In their dark and chilly beds Wake up, wake up, from their winter s sleep, And lift their tiny heads. Come up to the warm, bright sunshine, Come up to find the light; Tis dark and chilly here below, Come up to the world so bright I Then upwards to the world they go, A long and weary way, Until at the end of their journey slow They burst into the day. Oh, how the streams are singing I Dancing their way along! To the sky above are winging The birds with happy song; The leaves are rustling in the trees, By dancing branches whirled; The grass is waving in the breeze;-- Tis Springtime s happy world. STORY OF BUZZY. W. H. S. To be told when a...
