The continuing conservatorship of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac at a time of uncertainty in the housing, mortgage, and financial markets has raised doubts about the future of these enterprises, which are chartered by Congress as government-sponsored enterprises (GSEs) and whose debts are widely believed to be implicitly guaranteed by the federal government. In the second quarter of 2012, both Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac reported profits for the first time since the fourth quarter of 2006. Also, the second quarter of 2012 was first time that neither GSE had to request financial support from the Treasury. The Treasury has agreed to buy mortgage-backed securities (MBSs) from the GSEs and to raise funds for them. Under terms of the federal governments purchase of their preferred stock, the enterprises are required to pay the government dividends of nearly 20 billion annually (10 of the support). Housing, mortgage, and even general financial markets remain in an unprecedented situation. Estimates of the total cost to the federal government use different baselines and vary widely. The FHFA estimates that Treasury is likely to purchase 220 billion-311 billion of senior preferred stock by the end of 2014. The Congressional Budget Office estimates the budget cost to be more...
