Excerpt: . . . 11 United States will take an aggressive position and say, We are going to fight back. We are not going to accept other countries tak-ing markets that have traditionally been ours because they have simply got more resources to go out and buy them. That would do more good in terms of getting a result than any other single thing we could do. We are going to hear from witnesses in the next panel, especially those from the rice industry, that slumping U. S. Food Aid donations are having a major impact on our exports of commodities, in-cluding rice. In fact, our food donations this year are about half of last years level. Can you tell us why the falloff Ms. S. Mr. Chairman, if you do not mind, I would like HARPLESS Mary Chambliss - she is also...
